Open Banking Expo Awards announce the finalists

Open Banking Expo is delighted to announce that the shortlist for its inaugural Awards ceremony has been released and is now live on the Open Banking Expo Awards website. More than 90 financial institutions, fintechs and Open Banking pioneers across the globe are featured on the list.

Open Banking Expo co-founder, Kelly Stanley, said: "I'd like to thank everyone who submitted their entries. The quality and volume of submissions blew us away; the judging panel will have a difficult job in deciding who the winners will be! We are looking forward to revealing them at the ceremony in July."

The Open Banking Expo Awards will take place virtually during Fintech Week London on 15th July at 16:00 BST.

The launch partners of the Open Banking Expo Awards are Crif and Equifax. It will celebrate the innovators, disruptors and visionaries across the globe who have been at the forefront of the Open Banking revolution.

Sara Costantini, managing director of CRIF, said:

"CRIF is delighted to be a launch partner for the inaugural Open Banking Expo Awards and to be part of this Open Banking and Open Finance community. We are proud to align our brand with the companies and individuals that are the driving force behind Open Banking and Open Finance across the globe, and we would like to congratulate all the shortlisted candidates and wish them the best of luck."

Emma Steeley, CEO at AccountScore, an Equifax company said:

"It's clear from the quality of the awards shortlist that the industry as a whole is embracing Open Banking innovation. We strongly believe in the power of transaction data to help organisations transform how they make decisions about their customers, so we are delighted to be involved in the Open Banking Expo Awards".
